5,000 Visit Len Small At Beautiful Country Home

The sentiment, soulfulness and above all absolute sincerity, the key note of the Republican campaign in Illinois this year, was thoroughly manifest in the attendance and attitude of the visiting Republicans assembled at the former governor's home at Kankakee on Monday afternoon, August 29th.

Between 600 and 700 cars filled highway 44 enroute from Joliet from which assembling point the delegations from the four counties comprising the 11th District were conducted by Judge Fred R. Adams, chairman of the Will County Republican Central Committee.

The scene on the spacious lawn surrounding the Small residence was not only colorful, but harmonious, and while smiles and beaming countenances were in evidence, there was a pervading air of seriousness, indicating a thorough appreciation of the important responsibility and duty resting upon the electorate of the 11th District and the entire State of Illinois in returning to the governorship, our neighbor and friend, Len Small who for eight years of the reconstruction period, served us so faithfully.

Hon. Justus L. Johnson of Aurora, State Central Committeeman with Judge Franklin Stransky, chairman of the State Republican Committee were in charge of the speaking program, and short addresses were made by the former governor and several candidates for state and local offices.

Mokena was well represented, the local contingent being conducted by precinct committeeman Elmer I. Cooper who took a keen interest in promoting the success of the event.

The News-Bulletin was represented by Editor Wm. Semmler and Mrs. Semmler who were accompanied by J. V. Hall of Mokena, Robt. Wilson of New Lenox and Don C. Hall chairman of the Mokena unit "Back to Prosperity, Len Small for Governor Club".

Mokena has the distinction of being the first precinct to organize a unit for the assistance of the local county, district and state campaign committees.

MOKENA BOARD ORDERS ARREST OF VEHICLE TAX DELINQUENTS

The village of Mokena has had a hard time collecting all of the vehicle licenses and at the council meeting Wednesday night, the board took drastic steps to enforce the collection of outstanding vehicle licenses by passing a resolution asking that warrants be issued at once for the arrest of the offenders and the names were turned over to deputy sheriff Karl E. Kraus with orders to make the arrests promptly. It was the consensus of the board that no favoritism be shown and that if only part of the auto owners pay their license and the others are allowed to get by without paying, it is unfair to those who pay and the ordinance in such an event should be abolished. It was the decision of the board that either every auto owner operating a car on the village streets and who is a resident of the village be made to pay his vehicle tax or none at all.

Some auto owners of the village have taken out their auto licenses, but fail to display them on their cars.

Congregation Surprises Pastor on Anniversary

Trinity Lutheran church of Tinley Park agreeably surprised its pastor, Rev. Wm. Greve last Sunday, the occasion being the 25th anniversary of the ordination of the pastor as a minister. Special services were arranged for 2:30 o'clock p. m. A former classmate, the Rev. Theo. Sieimn of Chicago, addressing the congregation. The elders conducted the pastor to his seat of honor, followed by a large number of visiting pastors with their families, as well as relatives and friends. A quartet composed of Teacher W. H. Schmidt, Student Ruben Ehler, and Wm. Schilling and Mr. Henry Witte, a member of the church, rendered an appropriate anthem in a very pleasing manner. After the sermon, messages of congratulations formerly served by the pastor, of fellow classmates and other friends were read.

The congregation thru its board of elders had collected a large gift which was presented to the pastor as a token of appreciation for the ministerial work he rendered during the last 15 years as pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church. The pastor was given an opportunity to address the congregation and explained that he was so taken by surprise, he hardly knew whom to thank for the arrangements of the celebration, but nevertheless deeply appreciated everything the congregation had so kindly done and stated that the Lord would reward such kindness. He stated that he had tried to conscientiously fulfill his duty as a pastor, and that by the grace of God he would continue to serve the church to the best of his ability.

After the services the congregation remained for a social gathering and the ladies served a sumptuous meal to all who were present, some 300 persons partaking of the good things which had been presented by the members of the congregations. Later in the evening another luncheon was served before the guests departed to their various homes.

Rev. Wm. Greve was ordained at Milwaukee, Wis., on July 28, 1907. His first charge was the Mesaba Iron Range Country in Northern Minnesota. He was introduced by the Rev. H. C. Hinz, of Duluth, Minn., at Hibbing and Virginia, Minn., Sept. 8, 1907. Besides these two mentioned cities he also served Chisholm, which was practically destroyed by a disastrous forest fire, Sept. 8, 1908 and Meadowslands, Eveleth, Sparta, Biwobih, Ashawa, Orr and other places on the Iron Range. In April of 1911 he was called as pastor to the congregation at Lester Prairie, Minn., and since May 1917 has been pastor of Trinity Lutheran church north of Tinley Park. On June 2, 1917, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Lily Gemmich of Lester Prairie, Minn., and the union was blessed with three children, Grace, William and Arthur. The congregation is in a prosperous healthy condition and the pastor and his flock are on intimate friendly terms.

DEMONSTRATE FIRE TRUCK AT MOKENA

Representatives of the W. S. Darley Company manufacturers of fire fighting equipment held a demonstration of a fire apparatus mounted on a Ford chassis in Mokena Wednesday night. The fire truck was connected up with a fire plug in front of the Mokena Hardware Co., store. A single line of hose was used first, then 2 leads of hose. Several smaller sizes of fire hose were also used. The water was pumped direct from the water mains. The various types of hose threw powerful streams of water. A large crowd of people watched the demonstration. The village board is not in a position to purchase this type of fire fighting equipment and it is probable that if a fire department is organized the equipment might be purchased by public subscription as has been done in neighboring villages. Mokena is sorely in need of an organized fire department and modern fire fighting equipment.

I pledge that if elected I will use every resource at the command of the state's attorney to bring perpetrators of such crimes to justice. They will be shown no leniency but will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law."

"While I am not in favor of the 18th amendment", Mr. Loughran said, "because of its effect on the grain market of the farmer and for numerous other reasons, I will nevertheless enforce the laws as they now stand on the statute books."

"I have made no promises regarding the appointment of assistant state's attorneys or an investigator if I am elected and I will not be bound by any faction or group but will conduct the office to the best interests of all the people of all classes in the county."

If You Like A Parade, Go To Orland Labor Day Afternoon

We Are at War!

By GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING

Here's a stirring call to arms that summons the spirit of those half-forgotten days of resolute marching men

Article I

FOURTEEN years ago an army of two million American citizens was gathering in France. They had left their homes and families and businesses; they had traveled three thousand miles across submarine-infested seas; and now they were ready to lay down their lives, if need be, for their country. Millions more, in America, were prepared to follow them and do likewise.

Today the nation faces another crisis, in which the enemies allied against us are more insidious but not less dangerous. Pervasive self-seeking and corruption, which the chosen officers of the law seem powerless to suppress; the sinister growth of the underworld, whose tentacles reach out to touch us all; the ever-increasing extravagance of government; and the mysterious paralysis of our economic system—these are the enemies which now confront us. They have been allowed to encroach upon us largely through our own carelessness and neglect of duty as citizens.

In the battle against them the average citizen is at a disadvantage because he is unprepared; he is willing enough, but he is bewildered. He doesn't yet realize that he himself is primarily to blame, hence he is taking no serious part in the conflict. By average citizen I mean a great many men to whom we should look for leadership, as well as the larger number who possess no qualifications for it. In fact, too often do citizens of all classes assume that politics, and crime, and even economics, are no business of theirs. It does not occur to them that they are, every one, individually, responsible.

Why is it that patriotism burns so brightly in times of war, so dimly in times of peace? It is just as necessary in meeting the complex obligations of peace, but these obligations do not stir the imagination like the primitive emotions of war. The average citizen feels that, somehow, the problems of peace will be solved for him, and fails to realize the possibility that calamity may result from his own indifference.

Still Can Be Proud.

We have as much reason now as we had fourteen years ago to feel proud of our country and to love it. We believe, with some justice, that it is the greatest republic in the history of the world. Under no flag in the world does a people enjoy more freedom or find greater happiness. We boast of public education, universal suffrage, liberty of speech and the press. We enjoy rights undreamed of in ancient Greece and Rome. Yet even with the sounder principles upon which to base the hope of permanence of our institutions, we too may some day go down, as did these older republics, unless we recognize and live up to our civic obligations. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon every citizen in a democracy that it is his duty to help—actively help—in the task of government.

The other day I was talking to a substantial business man from New York. We were discussing an issue of increased taxation then up before the house of representatives.

"By the way," I said, "who is the representative from your district?"

He grinned sheepishly.

"I don't know," he said.

My friend pays a goodly share of taxes to support the government, and yet he doesn't know who votes for him on the tax question. He relies on "a substitute" and doesn't even know who the substitute is!

This is something of a retrogression from an earlier period. When our government was founded, our forefathers did not let unknowns represent them. They made it their business to know all about the character and achievements of the men they elected to public office. Then the outstanding men in the country took part in politics, and most of the high positions were held by them. Political leaders, then, were chosen by the voters. Now, through the apathy of the voters, they are often chosen by other politicians.

Changing Social Life.

This change is partly due to our changing social life. Many of us do not even know our next-door neighbors. But it is a manifestation of a deeper and more sinister change—the tendency of the average citizen to let somebody else do his thinking for him. That tendency threatens the very foundations of democracy.

"Let some one else do the thinking." That easy doctrine is injuring us not only in politics but in other fields. Under it crime flourishes and business languishes.

Some international bankers, since the war, have been careless in lending other people's money on foreign securities. Others have been charged with something worse than carelessness. But the citizens who, against sound business principles, put up the money were not without blame. In their eagerness for gain, they too often refused to think for themselves. They preferred to delegate that task to some one else. It was well known to all who read the newspapers that certain governments had already defaulted on debts to their own people. Greedy investors did not balk because of that, but cheerfully put up billions to loan to states, municipalities, and industries of those same governments.

This is not an essay on economics. I am not an economist. I did not foresee the depression, nor do I know when it is going to end, though past experience teaches me the upturn is bound to come, perhaps slowly, perhaps suddenly when we least expect it.

"No matter how sure you are of victory, never fail to make full provision for a reverse."

This rule is axiomatic with every capable military leader, but it was ignored by most of our business leaders during the boom years. Few made plans for anything except triumphant advance from one objective to another. Many burned their bridges behind them. Then the advance was halted and the recession began. It cannot be said that they were to blame for that recession, for apparently our puny human minds have not yet solved the riddle of the business cycle. They were to blame for having made no plans to keep the retreat from turning into a rout. Business might profit ably write that military axiom into its books for the years to come.

We have made two other military blunders. We began by underestimating the strength of the enemy, and progressed from that to overestimating it. The cry, "We are just turning the corner," of 1929-30, was the equivalent of "We will have the boys out of the trenches by Christmas" of 1914-15. And our "This country is going to the dogs," of 1932 is the equivalent of "The Central Powers are invincible" of March, 1918. I have heard leading men, given over to fear, prate of national failure, bankruptcy, and Lulled Into Complacency By Prosperity, Our Citizens Passively Accepted This Poisonous Growth With Small Concern.

Bolshevism This is no time for craven cringing. Looking out of my window, I see the shaft of the monument to Washington. I think of Valley Forge, and wonder how those who now lament and wring their hands would have enjoyed that winter. This is Washington's bicentennial. It is time for a new reckoning, a new responsibility, a new courage.

During the winter past many a good man, willing and able to work, has gone through a hell of unemployment and uncertainty. Remembering that, we may also find that some good, along with the evil, comes out of all depressions.

I am not a stranger to depressions. Economists tell us that the panic of 1873 was the closest analogy which history furnishes to our present troubles. My father, a well-to-do business man and farmer in Missouri, was caught in that general disaster. I was just thirteen years old. One day my father told me the whole story.

"John," he said, "everything I own has been swept away except the farm, which is covered by a heavy mortgage." (We finally lost it.) "I must try to make some money by traveling as a salesman. While I am away you must take care of the family and manage the farm." During the next three years my brother and I ran the farm. We plowed, sowed, and reaped. We took our produce to market. Those days were not so different from these for the farmer. I remember we had a field of timothy hay which was particularly fine. I baled it up, carload of it, and sent it by rail to St. Louis, hoping to receive a top price, but it did not bring enough to cover the freight charges.

During those years my attendance at school was limited and I had to do the best I could to keep up with my classes by studying at night. Those were certainly hard times. Yet, "sweet are the uses of adversity," and it was the best thing that ever happened to me. It taught me more, gave me greater confidence and a keener sense of responsibility than anything else could have done.

Unsuspected Powers.

I cite my own experience merely to show how men and women actually gain a new strength and courage when thrown upon their own resources and responsibility in times of crisis. They find in themselves powers they never suspected.

The life of a military man furnishes another example valuable in times like the present. In every army career there come occasional times of dullness. The officer, stationed at some remote army post, has his routine duties to perform. When these are completed he finds the temptation almost overwhelming to give over his leisure to cards, light reading, social evenings, painless time-wasting. It is the officer who resists that temptation, who spends hard hours each day studying the latest advances in artillery technique, in transport, in tactics—it is this officer who receives recognition when the opportunity for active service comes.

So it is in business. In this time of extreme dullness, many have sunk back into a kind of lethargy. But the wise business man, like the conscientious officer, is using his present leisure to prepare for the battles to come. He is devising new economies of production and distribution. He is studying the problem of how his product may be varied or made more attractive. He is getting ready to take advantage of the upturn when it comes. He is not accepting gloomy defeatism. He is thinking for himself.

I have touched at some length on the depression because it has so glaringly shown us the folly of carelessly delegating our thinking to others.

It has also thrown a bright cold light on the flaws in our political methods and on our crime problem. During the years of prosperity following the war an underworld of gangsters and racketeers unparalleled in any other civilized nation, grew up and flourished in our cities. The criminals who manned this underworld were of a new type. They were not the masked and shabby plug-uglies who filled the jails in earlier years. They were expensively dressed; they owned machine guns, high-powered cars, and speed boats; they had money in the bank. With this money they were able to establish a relation with corrupt officials and police which seemed to make them immune from prosecution.

Association With Sage

Not One-Sided Honor

That's a grand Shaw story. The one relating to his trip to Russia. Strolling along the banks of the Volga, he encountered a beautiful girl playing in the sand.

He stopped to chat with the child, who immediately took a liking to the bearded sage. They walked along the river for a while, her hand in his, Shaw, enjoying the trivialities of which they talked. Finally the little one informed the Shavian body that it was time for her to go home.

"Good-by, my dear," he said, "and when mother asks you where you have been, tell her you have been walking along the Volga with George Bernard Shaw."

The great name was absolutely unknown to the child, but she recognized the courtesy in the words of her strange friend and was not to be outdone. Her pleasant smile and bow acquired a quaint gravity. She replied:

"And when you go home and they ask you where you have been tell them that you were walking along the Volga with Katherina Ivanovna Fyodorovitch."—New York Morning Telegraph.

The money will be used in bridge construction over the waterway. The federal government is financing completion of the channel. Of a $20,000,000 waterway bond issue authorized in referendum, $18,000,000 in bonds have been sold.

Statements from the biennial report of Oscar Nelson, auditor of public accounts, which has just been released show that receipts ordered into the state treasury from July 1, 1930 to June 30, 1932, totaled $257,222,541.88. Money appropriated by the Fifty-seventh general assembly amounted to $366,499,468.83, while warrants issued from July 1, 1930 to June 30, 1932, totaled $253,234,742.52. Trust funds warrants issued during the same period aggregated $5,831,953.91.

Through the efforts of Milton E. Jones, general manager of the Illinois State fair, and co-operation of leaders in the various breed organizations, four national exhibitions united with the fair this year will place its live stock show in front rank among the agricultural fairs of North America. They are the National Swine show, the National Hereford Cattle exhibition, the National Shorthorn Cattle exhibition, and the Regional Jersey Cattle show. Mr. Jones, a nationally known stockman himself, is to be complimented upon this accomplishment.

For the purpose of preventing an increase in the state tax rate on real and personal property estimated at 80 per cent or about 33 cents per $100 assessed valuation, a meeting of representatives of 15 state-wide organizations was held in Chicago on August 10. Plans were made for a campaign to secure adoption of the pending $20,000,000 emergency relief bond issue. These bonds will provide the funds with which to retire the emergency relief state tax notes already sold and thus avoid the levy of an additional state tax.

Bernard A. Weaver, Chicago, has been appointed chief factory inspector in the department of labor, according to an announcement by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. The governor has also accepted the resignation of David Kinley, former president of the University of Illinois, as a member of the state tax commission. His successor was not named.

Truck owners who obtained licenses for trailers and tractors which are forbidden in Illinois under the new statute setting limits as to length, will get no refund of license money, it has been indicated by Secretary of State Stratton on receipt of a ruling from Attorney General Carlstrom. The truck owners applying for refunds were those who, in obtaining licenses, failed to give the length of their vehicles and combinations. The licenses could not have originally been issued had the lengths been given.

The original manuscript of Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address has been offered for sale at Springfield by Attorney Robert Johnson acting for the owner, Mrs. Margaret O'Herron of Streator. Mrs. O'Herron states that Lincoln's friendship for her father, T. B. Keegan of Ottawa, at whose home Lincoln was snowbound while a circuit rider, was responsible for the gift of the manuscript to her by Lincoln's son.

Mrs. Orville Burnett of Bluff City died in a hospital in Vandalia from burns suffered when she attempted to kindle a fire with coal oil.

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson took the oath of office as a judge of the Federal District court in the Federal building in Chicago. His assistant, Dwight H. Green, was sworn in as United States attorney at the same time.

The annual divisional review in honor of the governor was held at Camp Grant Illinois National Guard training camp near Rockford on August 13. Mrs. Emmerson and a granddaughter accompanied Governor Emmerson to the camp for the guardsmen's activities.

Motor traffic accidents in Illinois during the first six months of 1932 resulted in 953 fatalities, according to statistics issued by the state department of public health. This number is sharply less than for the corresponding period in 1931, but little improvement in the ratio of fatal accidents to the total registration of motor vehicles is shown.

Joke on Grandma

Jane, age six, was just getting over a cold when her grandma came to visit her. After a couple weeks she was much better.

One day at the table, grandma was bragging how rosy Jane's cheeks were and said: "Jane, if you play outdoors you will always have rosy cheeks."

After dinner Jane went to her nursemaid and said: "You know, Peggy, grandma was bragging how rosy my cheeks were, but she doesn't know I put rouge on. That's a joke on grandma."

Of 95,040 head of cattle tested for tuberculosis on the farms of Illinois during the month of July, only 386, or four-tenths of 1 per cent reacted according to D. W. Robison, superintendent of the divisional animal industry in the state department of agriculture. This is another new low mark and is highly gratifying to live stock disease control authorities.

Ten months before its official opening, A Century of Progress—Chicago's 1933 International exposition—is assuming a world's fair atmosphere. Seven major exhibit buildings are standing, six more have been begun. Hundreds of workmen are riveting steel, fastening wall board in place, and laying public utilities that would serve an average city of 100,000 inhabitants. Busses and passenger boats are already in operation.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has announced the appointment of Rice Miller, of Hillsboro, as a member of the Illinois commerce commission. Miller, who was prominent in the ranks of the Illinois coal operator organization for a number of years, fills a vacancy caused by the resignation of Charley Hadley of Wheaton. Mr. Hadley retired from the commission to make the Republican primary race for attorney general.

Brig. Gen. John J. Garrity, Illinois National Guard, will retire as commander of the Sixty-sixth infantry brigade on August 20, it has been announced at Camp Grant, where the general is seeing his last encampment with the guard. General Garrity, former chief of police of Chicago, has been in the National Guard for 43 years, having started as a private in Company L, Second Illinois volunteers.

A ten-year lease of Faries park in Decatur for a state fish hatchery, obtained in 1928 by the state department of conservation has been declared void by Attorney General Carlstrom. The Decatur park district asked the department to relinquish the land.

The state department of public works and buildings has announced awards of 13 highway construction contracts that will provide $320,731.43 worth of work, well scattered over Illinois. This list of contracts placed, according to highway officials, includes several street improvement jobs, and calls for paving gaps and grade separations.

Dr. J. F. Mohan of Pontiac was elected president of the Illinois Elks at the close of their state convention. Roy Preston of Pekin was elected vice president; Nelson H. Millard of Aurora, secretary, and William Fritz of Peoria, treasurer. The Joliet Legion drum corps won first prize.

Tuition rates at the University of Illinois this fall will remain the same as last year, according to H. B. Ingalls, bursar. Although some endowed institutions have announced reductions in tuition, the tuition at Illinois will still be lower than many similar institutions throughout the country. Tax warrants of the Chicago board of education will be accepted in payment in tuition fees, Mr. Ingalls announced.

The cost of education at the University of Illinois has dropped about 22 per cent, according to the findings of Dr. Fred H. Turner, dean of men. This is true not only in the savings the university is to effect in its state appropriations for the biennium but also in the living costs of the student body on the campus. Contributing mostly to the saving of the students and their parents is the reduction in cost of board, room and clothing. Dean Turner believes that a boy desiring a higher education at the University of Illinois can attend for one year at a cost of $337, provided he can earn his board. Those boys from families of moderate means may expend $748 during the same time, while he also believes that $1,517 is ample to furnish a boy with unlimited means.

Three cleaning and dyeing establishments in Chicago, one of them under the protection of a court injunction, were bombed in another flurkey of the war on the cut-rate shops. A watchman and the two proprietors of one of the shops had a narrow escape when they almost walked onto a bomb as it exploded.

Steps to get the various civic and industrial forces of Illinois now working for improvements in the state revenue laws to combine into one state-wide organization were taken in Chicago. With reductions in general property taxes and more equitable distribution of the tax load as its goal, the movement was initiated at a meeting attended by representatives of many organizations at the Union League club.

Adaptable Berry

The strawberry is said to be the most adaptable fruit.

Quite Up to Date

Grandma had long since turned the crest of the hill dividing youth and age. She was entertaining Bobbie, her diminutive grandson, while his mother did some errands downtown, and she found him unusually restless. Having tried various methods unsuccessfully, in desperation, she exclaimed: "Well, Bobbie, you are so naughty I don't know what to do with you!"

Bobbie, with modern philosophy, returned: "Oh, that's all right, grandma, just forget it."

Ash Can Derby BigEvent Next Sunday

Owing to the cut in admission prices, arrangements have been made to handle the largest crowd that has ever attended a race meet at the Roby Chicago Speedway when professional automobile races, motorcycle races and the Ash Can Derby will be run on next Sunday afternoon Sept. 4th. Forty-three entries have been received for the professional automobile races and this is the largest entry list that has ever signed for an event over the fast mile track.

Many of the names are well-known to racing fans and many of them are newcomers to Roby, but one thing that those connected with racing feel certain of, is that the races will have more thrills in them than any events held here in recent years, as the competition between forty-three cars will be so keen that it is almost certain that there will be many wrecks before the day's program is over.

The qualifying trials which will start at 10 o'clock in the morning should also be very interesting.

The professional auto race entries are Carl Young, Gus Schrader, Dick Doyle, Shorty Cantone, Whiz Sloan, Carl Lieber, Milt Jones, Jr., Adolph Bitowt, Emil Andres, Max E. Dose, James Ewers, Louis Brown, Glenn Price, Art Cannon, A. L. Spillman, James Leatherman, Pete Romceiril, Cliff Henderson, Le Glen Fites, R. M. Parrish, Pip Henson, Roy Walker, Don Rhu, Howard King, Lloyd Baxter, Joe Pole, Fred Holmes, M. H. Tetterton, Thomas J. Slattery, Clement O'Brien, Verne Franke, Tony Rute, Leslie Harmon and others.

The Ash Can Derby, the World's Worst Automobile Race attracted seventeen entries and B. Ward Beam who is handling the event says he believes he will have to run the Ash Can Derby as the last event on the program as it will probably take days to get the wrecks off the track.

There are eleven entries for the motorcycle races and this is the first time in years that motorcycle races have been run in the Chicago district.

The races will start at three o'clock sharp.

FOLKS WE'D MISS

It takes a lot of folks to run

A world as big as this;

And, while we wish that some were gone,

A lot of them we'd miss.

We'd miss the bird who has a smile

And always likes to show it;

We'd miss the man who likes his friends

And lets the whole world know it;

We'd miss the guy who always has

The time to say "Hello!"

The chap who's always in the game.

The first to say "Let's go!"

And if we'd miss those kind of guys,

Well, wouldn't it be true

That folks would miss us when we're

gone,

If we were that way, too?

WHEN traveling between Mount Vernon, Fredricksburg and Williamsburg, Washington was a frequent guest at Rippon Lodge, a house built about 1725, later the home of Col. Thomas Blackburn, "friend and comrade in arms of Gen. Washington", reads the tablet placed at the entrance by the Mount Vernon Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Rippon Lodge, near Dumfries on U. S. 1, was also the family home of Mrs. Bushrod Washington (Ann Blackburn) and Mrs. John Augustine Washington (Jane Charlotte Blackburn) each in turn the mistress of Mount Vernon.

THE tea-bushes in the foreground have grown on the lawn at Rippon Lodge since Colonial days when England enacted a tax on tea. The non-importation resolutions drawn at Gunston Hall by George Mason, introduced in the House of Burgesses by George Washington, and favorably reported on by the Chairman of the Committee, Col. Thomas Blackburn, made the tea discussion a neighborhood affair. But how significant its bearing upon the country's future!

GREAT MAN'S WIFE

By FANNIE HURST

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

THE story of the Simeses was in many respects the usual one of a man having gone on in worldliness and social achievement quite beyond the wife, who had stood still after marriage, as the saying goes.

Again, the story of the Simeses was quite unusual in this respect. Frank Simes had gone on in a manner as unusual as it was startling. At thirty-one, the young clerk in a second-rate publishing house, while off on a two weeks' holiday at an obscure seaside resort with his wife, had filled in his spare time writing a description of the life about him.

At forty-one that same nearsighted, not highly personable young man had developed into one of the most successful literary men of his time. At fifty-one, he was a world-figure, the center of a school of disciples who were content to bask on the rim of his reflected glory, and his fine country place was the mecca for pilgrims who were not content to return to their native heaths without being able to say that they had at least glimpsed the retreat of the great god Simes.

Charabancs and various sight-seeing excursions along the state highway which bordered one end of the Simes estate, pointed out with pride the country home of the renowned author.

While still a comparatively young man, Simes had become a sort of shrine. The achievement of this, scouted in the small world of sophisticates as the antics of a literary charlatan, was nonetheless one to impress a vast public. It could also be said that it probably impressed Mary Simes even more than it did the layman.

More and more, as they grew older together, Mary was to ask herself this question concerning Simes. How? How had he accomplished the almost incredible? She, Mary, better than anyone else in the world, sycophants who crowded around him, enemies who jeered, knew the caliber of the man Simes. Knew the relentless ego of him which flung out in all directions like the tentacles of some sea serpent, strangling where it could. Knew the strangely feeble equipment of this man whose pen somehow, some way, had loaded into its point persuasion and personality. Everything about this man, her husband, she knew, and knowing, marveled. How had he achieved his almost unique position in the world of letters?

There were, of course, people who said his somewhat plain wife was the power behind the throne, but then that is said practically of every public man with a plain wife.

There were also those who marveled at the constancy of Simes, so strangely attractive to women in what might be called a repellent way. They seemed to read in the eyes of Simes, strange eyes set one slightly higher than the other, decadent forbidden things that wrapped his personality with the half-evil lure of the genii.

Simes, in a curious inverted manner, had a way with women just as in a curious inverted manner, he must have had a way with his vast public.

It was not this rather oblique lure which surprised Mary, she must have capitulated to it herself, in the days when he was a humble clerk. It was the stability of his success which never ceased to amaze and secretly to appall her.

How did Simes, superficially educated, superficially informed, superficially the thinker, the student, the man of letters, hold with a strangle grip the interest, fascination and admiration of his public?

Sometimes, in her loneliness and heart-hurt, passionately she admitted to herself, that she, Mary, the wife whom to all intents and purposes he had outgrown, was the answer. She, Mary, who was the buffer between him and his public; the creator of the illusions about him; the weaver of legends and the hand at the helm of his phantom ship of literary illusion.

Then again Mary told herself, trying to ferret the secret of his undimishing luster, no one person alone could account for it. Not even the years of her secret sacrifices, her humiliations, her pretenses and her display of admiration where he was concerned were sufficient to solve the riddle.

Somewhere in the makeup of Simes must reside real greatness. The fact that she, Mary Simes, had alone built up the illusion of the great man seemed almost too fantastic to be true.

There was one man knew it to be true. Johann Brody. Ten years after her marriage to Simes, Mary and Brody had met, drifting together almost immediately on an innate sympathy which had ripened their friendship into something too profound and potentially dangerous to be discussed between them.

Johann Brody, Simes' lawyer, was in love with Mary; with her plainness, her unstylish exterior, her drab look of blending against background, she had flashed bright as a flamingo into his life. Twenty years of the unspoken word between them. Twenty years had marched past to her flush at his hand shake, her eye brightening at his entrance, her glance yearning when his glance was averted.

Two middle-aged, hungry spirits, fluttering as near together as they dared.

Brody knew to what extent Mary had manufactured the success of Simes. It was the only intimate subject they ever permitted themselves to discuss together, and then only under pretense of legal affairs. Time and time again, instigated by one thing or another, Brody had openly credited Mary with being the impulse that had pushed Simes from the position of a humble clerk in a publishing house to the unique standing he had achieved in the world of letters.

It was only when a crisis came however, that he permitted himself what approximated full statement of the boiling sentiments that had been pressing against his restraint for years.

So it had come at last! After years of her husband's infelicity, his blatant threat of infidelity, his parade of mock susceptibility, complication had stalked into the lives of Mary and Simes. He had finally fallen in love with an actress playing popular roles in a repertory company in Philadelphia.

The surprise lay in the fact that it had not come before. Years of hardening herself to the public display of Simes' philandering had not quite prepared Mary for the clap of thunder which came with his calm avowal to her one evening that the end of their relationship had come.

Simes was going to divorce her! The door to happiness and freedom, so long adamantly closed against her, was about to swing open.

Little wonder that as Mary faced Brody that evening following the avowal of Simes of his love for another woman and his intention to divorce her, the bonds of their mutual restraint broke simultaneously.

"I'm free now, Brody," she said simply. "It's been so long waiting." He took her in his arms, kissing the smooth, graying, patient-looking hair where it flowed black from her forehead.

"It's been a long wait, Mary. How strange it will be at our age, to really begin to live for the first time."

"It's too good to be true, Brody."

"My dearest dear."

"You—my dearest dear."

"He doesn't know it, Mary. Fool. But the day he gives you up is the end of Simes."

"You mean . . ."

"Why darling—without you, he falls to pieces like a one-hoss shay—every bolt in his make-up has been you. Good-by Simes!"

Poor Brody, hammering the nails into the coffin of his own happiness. Strange, but with his words, the realization flooded Mary that all her life she would stand by to hold together the one-hoss shay.

People called her prideless—fool, idiot, parasite, for refusing to grant Simes his divorce.

Grimly, watching the years stalk by, and with them her chances for personal happiness, Mary also calls herself all those things.

But, grimly too, she realizes that in the public humiliation of her refusal to grant Simes his divorce, lies the secret of his alleged greatness.

Swiss Wise in Passing Laws to Protect Fish

If there are still trout in the lakes and mountain streams of Switzerland, which have been fished for 600 years, we can preserve trout in the streams of this continent. The way to do it is to do it; and one of the means probably lies in not allowing anybody to cast line or gig into any stream for long periods of time.

It is the only way. Beyond a doubt, in Switzerland it is unheard of to explode dynamite in a water course to totally destroy all the fish, frogs, newts, minnows, crayfish, waterworms, water spiders and water striders that skate on the surface—hydrobatidae, so-called by scientists. Dynamite kills every living thing, finny creatures and their food simultaneously. And it is surprising that the mosses, the very algae floating in the water, does not perish. In Switzerland that kind of pursuit of fish is unknown. But Switzerland has had hundreds of year to grow wise—and efficient in its laws.—F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Confirm Bible Story

Further verification of the Bible story of the entrance of the Children of Israel into Canaan and the destruction of Jericho by the soldiers of Joshua has been obtained from the scarabs found in the royal tombs of Jericho. The bulk of the specimens range from about 2400 B. C. to about 1400 B. C.—the time of Amenophis III. The period from Akhenaton to Rameses II is a blank. Sir Charles Marston said: "The scarabs confirm that Jericho was destroyed by Joshua during the reign of Amenophis III, 1413 B. C. to 1377 B. C. And the exodus from Egypt, therefore, took place immediately after the death of Thothmes III, 1477 B. C., in the reign of Amenophis II."

Color Important in Siam

An interesting sidelight in connection with Bangkok newspapers, exclusive of the English press, is their use of colored paper. To the Siamese each day of the week stands for a different color, and many of them match their "panung" (the native costume) with the color of the day; for instance, a pink panung is worn on Sundays, a yellow on Mondays, etc. The newspapers endeavor to follow this custom to a certain extent; on Monday their editions are printed on yellow paper; on Thursday on green paper; Sundays on pink paper, and the rest of the days of the week on white paper.

EVILS OF INTemperance

GOLDEN TEXT—Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations.

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 5.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Evil of Drunkenness.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Wise Man Gives a Warning.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Obey the Law?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Observing and Enforcing Law.

I. Israel, the Favored Nation (vv. 1-7).

This nation's unique relation to God is presented under the figure of a vineyard. Observe:

1. God's peculiar favor (vv. 1, 2). God did for this nation what he did for no other nation in the history of the world. He fenced it when he assigned the boundaries of Israel's inheritance. (Num. 34:1-13.) He gathered out the stones when the Canaanites were exterminated. The choicest vine planted therein was the Israelitish nation which had gone through the disciplinary process in Egyptian bondage. He built a tower in it when under David Jerusalem was made its capital city.

2. The obligation of the nation (v. 2). The purpose of a vineyard is to bring forth grapes. The purpose of God in selecting and blessing the Israelitish nation was that it might bring forth fruit to his glory.

3. It bore only wild grapes (v. 4). Instead of sweet, luscious grapes, they bore grapes of a sour and unwholesome kind. How aptly this symbolizes Israel's life!

4. The desolation of the vineyard (vv. 5-7). Since all efforts had been wasted, the owner of the vineyard now resolved to abandon it. He purposed to take away the fences and leave it exposed to wild beasts, to be wasted and devoured by them.

II. The Sins Which Brought Ruin to Israel (vv. 8-23).

The causes of this destruction are presented under six woes, each woe pronounced against a particular sin:

1. Monopoly and oppression of the poor (vv. 8-10). The crime against which the first woe is directed is that of avaricious grasping after property which leads to the accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few. "Joining house to house and laying field to field" means the sin of the greedy monopolist who buys up the land on every side and ejects the small land holder. In the agricultural district it takes the form of the "land grabber." In the commercial centers it takes the form of the big man crushing out the small ones. This state of affairs met God's judgment in Judea, as seen in vv. 9 and 10, and one day it shall do likewise in America.

2. Dissipation (vv. 11-17). The sin here denounced is drunkenness. Several features are connected with this one sin:

a. Drinking made the life business of some (v. 11). They got up early and continued until late at night.

b. The effort to give their wicked business a show of refinement (v. 12). This is why pleasing music is heard in dens of infamy over our land.

c. Blindness to God's warnings and judgments (v. 12). Their drinking and dissipation rendered them insensible to the dealings of Providence.

d. God's judgments for such sin (vv. 13-17). They went into captivity. The immediate cause assigned was ignorance, but it was a willful ignorance for which they were held responsible. There was a great mortality among those who drank (v. 14). "Hell hath enlarged herself." The records everywhere show a much higher death rate among drinking men. Drinking degrades all classes (v. 15).

3. Unbelief (vv. 18, 19). This woe is directed against the sinner who presumptuously plunges into vice. He persists in iniquity and scoffs at judgment. This is peculiarly common among those who go about wine-drinking as a business.

4. Moral confusion (v. 20). This woe is pronounced against those who try to adjust moral conditions to suit their sinful appetites.

5. Conceit (v. 21). The fifth woe is pronounced against the sin of self-conceit, which holds a false estimate of human wisdom and acts without reference to God.

6. Perversion of justice (vv. 22, 23). The sixth woe is pronounced against unjust judges.

III. God's Treatment of Israel for Their Sins (vv. 24-30).

1. He stretched out his hand in anger against them (vv. 24, 25).

2. Chastised by the nations (vv. 26-30). God gave the signal and issued the call for the nations to chastise Israel.

CURRENCY IN DAYS OF NATION'S YOUTH

Revolutionary Paper Money of Little Worth.

The recently arranged exhibition at the Newark museum of types of paper and metal money and objects of barter used as a basis for exchange in this country during the lifetime of Washington furnishes an interesting sidelight from the past on the gold standard and the problems of a stable currency in a period of chaotic economies.

Certainly the early American currency was nothing if not varied. In the early Colonial days barter was a common method of exchange—fur, tobacco and Indian wampum being used because of the shortage of coins in the Colonies. What coinage there was consisted principally of English gold pieces and Spanish gold pieces from the Spanish main—these latter due to the rich trade carried on in the Caribbean and to the roving freebooters and pirates who not infrequently visited the English settlements on the Atlantic.

Coins were struck off in what is said to have been the first American mint, in Massachusetts, the material coming from melted-down foreign currency. This mint, opened under authority of the Colonial legislature, was later closed by the crown. Some attempt to relieve the shortage of currency was made through royal grant to private individuals. One of these, William Wood, undertook to make copper tokens for both Ireland and America, and when the Irish received them coldly all were eventually sent to the American Colonies.

Both congress and the individual Colonies experimented during the Revolution with paper money. As the credit behind the various issues was anything but firmly established, these issues depreciated practically to worthlessness, and after the establishment of the federal mint, in 1792, most of this currency was repudiated.

With the Republic a working organization, a new coinage was undertaken. It had been suggested that the head of Washington be used on the new coins, but he refused to permit it—agreeing with the widespread belief that it would be well to get away from the British-type coin with the heads or figures of royal personages. This started the precedent, which has been continued, of never using the head of a living person on the coins. The head of the goddess of liberty was used on the first coins struck at the Philadelphia mint.—New York Times.

The African Goose

Nothing definite is known of the origin of geese, according to the leading writers on poultry. It is said that they were held sacred in Egypt, 4,000 years ago. They were domesticated many centuries before the Christian era. Italy is said to be the home of domestic geese. Scientists claim that the "graylag" is the ancestor of all domestic geese. This probably arises from the fact that all of the earlier geese were gray or gray and white.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, of course, but one gets tired of vigilance.

A MOTHER has watched over her baby . . . day after day . . . thrilling to his every little gain . . . anxious about his smallest distress . . . Who can talk to you more understandingly than she? Today, there are more than a million mothers who could tell you gladly, convincingly, of the wonderful things that Eagle Brand has done.

Year after year—by hundreds, by thousands—they write to The Borden Company, to tell their dramatic human stories. They tell of babies who grew and gained and flourished on Eagle Brand, with never a set-back. They tell of babies who have won blue ribbons and silver cups. They tell of babies—once failing, starving, because they could not digest other foods—brought back to full health by Eagle Brand.

And often, they tell of handsome, healthy grown-up sons and daughters raised on Eagle Brand, and now giving this food to their babies.

They include a Baby Grand, a bungalow style Upright and a fine Player Piano, and at present are being stored in a nearby city. These instruments are modern, only slightly used with a large portion of the purchase price already paid. A signed guarantee protects the purchaser. I am authorized to transfer these pianos to responsible parties willing to pay out balance on easy monthly payments. For full particulars address Attorney, P. O. Box 195, Chicago, Illinois. 3tc

MOKENA

To the Mokena School District:
September is here and school is about to open. As there is still plenty of work to be done at the school yard, we are asking for volunteers to help destroy weeds, etc., at 8:30 a. m., Saturday, Sept. 1. We want to thank the men who so kindly volunteered and worked so hard last Friday. A mention of names will be omitted until further help is obtained. Let us feel that it is your duty and my duty to help beautify the school ground. There has also been a committee appointed of School Board Garden Club and P. T. A. members to make arrangements for seeding school grounds. Please cooperate with this committee by giving them volunteers of your service.

There will be English services on Sunday, Sept. 4th.

Mrs. F. A. Tooley is entertaining her mother from Harvey, Ill.

The Mokena Garden Club held a very delightful tea and party in the basement of St. John church Tuesday. It was in the form of a pot luck luncheon which was served at noon and the affair was given in honor of the civic committee of which Mrs. Anton Benson is chairman. The Civic committee composed of Mrs. H. Mall, Mrs. A. Braun and Mrs. F. Tooley has done some very fine work this spring and summer on the property of the Rock Island railroad and it is a fine sight to see the lovely flowers which have been blooming all summer. All honor to the ladies who labored so faithfully.

At the party bouquets of flowers were brought by the various members and the group as a whole formed the judges' committee and much enjoyment was had from the judging of these flowers. Discussions on various subjects pertaining to Garden work was had. At 4:30 the party dispersed all declaring a very pleasant afternoon was spent. The next regular meeting of the Garden Club will be next Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Enson and all members are urged to be present as it is hoped to have a picture of the Club taken.
